Meet Jen Dafoe

Jen believes that the more knowledge you have, the more you are able to better understand "what it's all about" and that helps reduce stress and anxiety when going to the hospital, dentist or other health care professional.

During her own appointments, Jen noticed that many children were experiencing similar anxiety and stress issues as she was. She decided that a series of easy to read story books for children and their parents on how to reduce stress and fear of upcoming medical procedures would be helpful.

Jen did extensive research and had personal consultations with leading health experts to ensure her information was current, correct, easy to understand and would be helpful to parents and children. She received extensive support from many health professionals who indicated that this basic information would help parents reduce their child's stress when facing any medical appointment or procedure.
