

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Buy Now

Meet Chico!

Picture

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Picture

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Donate

Send a gift

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?

Social media

Describe what parts of your life are publicly accessible, and consider what the implications might be for your online (and offline) identity. What social networking platforms do you use? Do you have your own website/domain? What information is available only to your friends/networks and what can be found by anyone (i.e., through Google search, etc.)? What are the implications of the visibility of your profile(s)?